December, 1971 [Etext #1]

The Project Gutenberg Etext of The Declaration of Independence.

All of the original Project Gutenberg Etexts from the 1970's were produced in ALL CAPS, no lower case. The computers we used then didn't have lower case at all.

This is a retranscription of one of the first Project Gutenberg Etexts, officially dated December, 1971— and now officially re-released on December 31, 1993—

The United States Declaration of Independence was the first Etext released by Project Gutenberg, early in 1971. The title was stored in an emailed instruction set which required a tape or diskpack be hand mounted for retrieval. The diskpack was the size of a large cake in a cake carrier, cost $1500, and contained 5 megabytes, of which this file took 1-2%. Two tape backups were kept plus one on paper tape. The 10,000 files we hope to have online by the end of 2001 should take about 1-2% of a comparably priced drive in 2001.

This file was never copyrighted, Sharewared, etc., and is thus for all to use and copy in any manner they choose. Please feel free to make your own edition using this as a base.

Bitstreams are not intelligible without the data formats, applications, operating systems, and hardware environments to interpret them

Systems are modified and replaced over time

“Traditionally, preserving things meant keeping them unchanged; however our digital environment has fundamentally changed our concept of preservation requirements. If we hold on to digital information without modifications, accessing the information will become increasingly difficult, if not impossible.”

Chen, S. S. (2001). The paradox of digital preservation. Computer, 34(3), 24-28.

Information about archiving agencies

The term 'Archiving Agency' represents an initiative that is running a programme for the long-term archiving of e-journals. Each participating agency is making metadata on the journals in their programme available to the Keepers Registry. The data supplied by the agencies is linked to the authoritative bibliographic information obtained from the ISSN Register.

The Keepers Registry is collecting data from the following archiving agencies.

Amnesiac civilization

“I've been warning for some time that one of the fundamental problems facing digital preservation is the evolution of content from static to dynamic.”

Dr. David Rosenthal, 2017

- With AJAX and HTML5, the web is transitioning from a document-centric information space, to an applications-based information space
- Content is tailored to people, locations, and devices. There is no “canonical version” of a webpage.

Feb 23rd Saturday

Revised Chapter 4 3[RG] of [Antigua 1d \[Penny\] Puce](#). Decided with Laura where to plant the bushes and trees we bought in Palma— mimosa, two oleanders, tamarisk, four others whose names we forget. Helped Sebastian to plant them. He grafted the almonds with nectarines.

The first full glass-ful of carnations: scarlet, pink, yellow and apricot fringed with red.

Karl and I damped second half of Laura's Second Leaf : proofs passed a week ago.<sup>1</sup>

Second day of sirocco: very violent this night: carried away tops of several olive-trees near house, tiles off houses in the Puig.

Rosa finished Laura's magenta dress which I bought her at Christmas for 10 pesetas.

Have worked without a brazier<sup>2</sup> for the first time this year, the last two days.

EDITORIAL NOTES

1. The Albion printing press was installed in Canellun in the press room next to RG's study. It had been used to print many of the Seizin Press publications. Laura Riding's Second Leaf was the last text or other item printed by LR & RG on the machine. WG

2. A brazier was a device in which charcoal was burned to heat the room. eds
